Called to order by: Amy Brice

Welcome & Introduction of Attendees: Amy Brice asked the question, what is your favorite part about spring: Warmer weather, still a little cool but not too hot, and also, baby chickens, spring is very sexual, a lot of reproduction occurs in the spring, botany is very sexual, countdown to the end of the school year, spring break, open windows, rainy spring nights, and beautiful flowers, winter is over and summer is on its way, longer daylight hours, being outside more and cooking out, soccer season, colors in the trees and flowers, light and brighter past 6pm, march madness, baseball, and camping and hiking, seeing everything come back to life, watching the perennials come out of the brown earth, pulling out my spring and summer clothes.

Highlights from Youth 360 game: Healthy Teen Network’s Youth 360 board game allows players to journey from the outside to the center of the board exemplifying the Youth 360° approach and the need to address the complex array of factors—or social determinants of health—at the societal, community, relationship, and individual levels—that affect health outcomes.

Game is from the Healthy Teen Network, prezi link <http://www.healthyteennetwork.org/resources/youth360/presentation>, The game allows us to think about how social determinates affect our youth and how we work with these youths in our organizations.

Feedback: Closer to the beginning of the school year, thumbs up.

Michelle: Fun you got to think outside the box

Katie: Some of the questions were challenging but also affirming that we are doing something right

Learned about organizations at my table, can collaborate with other organizations to meet the needs of youth.

Branches into a lot of different things, our impact spread across a lot of areas

Suggestions: Working with faith based, and how to meet the needs

Where else could you play this game? Working within the context of your specific organization, what are you already doing, are there any gaps, should we fill those internally or find someone to fill the gap. Could do it at a division meeting, this is public health philosophy, this helps to bring it back to adolescents. Could integrate this through the youth and adult perspectives, specifically with Carrera and working with parents and youth. Youth leaders across Tulsa. Staff or agency retreat. You could pair an adult with a youth so that come to the table with different perspectives. Asking youth, what can we do to change that? How can we help you and your community?

Organizational Spotlight: If you would like to be the organization highlighted in the future please let, Amy, Jessica, Heather, or Julie.
